This sketch is intended to guide the overall website navigation and page flow. It shows how the main pages and sub-pages should be organized in the menu for Phase-1 development. The purpose is to provide a clear structural reference while leaving design and implementation details to the developer's experience. The focus should be on clean hierarchy, easy navigation, and consistency across desktop and mobile views.

Home

The Home page should feel warm, welcoming, and visually engaging. At first glance, visitors should understand that VTI exists for Bible education that is accessible and designed for people of all ages, from childhood to old age. The page should not feel text-heavy or overly academic; instead, it should use imagery and simple messaging to communicate biblical learning, spiritual growth, and a sense of community. Go Gospel (worship music ministry) should be clearly visible on the Home page to reflect the connection between worship and Bible learning. Short snapshots should link to dedicated pages for further details. Overall, the page should feel like an invitation rather than an institution.

Go Gospel

The Go Gospel page should clearly present Go Gospel as VTI's worship and music ministry. This page should highlight monthly worship song releases and show how music is used as a tool for spiritual growth alongside Bible learning. The tone should be inspirational and community-focused, not commercial. Visitors should be able to see the latest release, previous songs, and the artists involved, with simple descriptions and links to YouTube or other listening platforms. The page should communicate that Go Gospel is not a standalone label but part of VTI's broader mission to nurture faith through worship and Scripture. The design should remain clean, visual, and welcoming.

Instructors

The Instructors section should function as a two-level public directory. First, there should be an Instructors listing page displaying instructor profile cards in a clean grid format (photo, name, and short title or teaching area). When a user clicks on an instructor's photo or card, it should open a public Instructor Profile page showing the instructor's photo, name, short bio or credentials, areas of teaching, and a list of the courses they contribute to. Each course name should be clickable and link to the relevant course page. The layout should be professional, welcoming, mobile-friendly, and structured to allow easy expansion as more instructors and courses are added.

Course Catalogue

The Course Catalogue consists of four categories:

Christian Foundation

- You Are Not Alone
- Christian Foundational Beliefs
- Exodus Journey of Faith

Bible Understanding and Interpretation

- Principle of Reading and Understanding Bible

Spiritual Growth and Christian Living

- Spiritual Life
- Christians Ethics

Christian Apologetics

- Unchanged Words

Each course belongs to one category and should be manageable through the admin panel.And since we are releasing website even at the time courses and LMS is not ready. We request each course has kind of Bar explaining it is developing and admin can update information has course progress towards release.

Team

The Team page should introduce the people behind VTI who serve in leadership, operations, and ministry support roles. This page should build trust and transparency by presenting the team in a clean and respectful manner, using profile cards with a photo, name, role or title, and optionally a short one-line description of their responsibilities.

Announcements

Announcements are straightforward and can be developed later. The admin console should have the ability to post and manage announcements.
